Bert Williams to Head Big Bill at the Century Theatre on Night of October 19.

Broadway stars will appear at the benefit performance on the night of October 19, 1919, at the Century Theatre, to raise funds for the erection of a Memorial to the Negroes of the 369th Infantry (Old 15th Reg.), who fell on the battlefields of France. Col. Wm. Jay Scheffelin and Lt. Col. Chas. W. Fillmore of the 15th Infantry, N. Y., are arranging the affair.

Among the theatrical celebrities who will appear are Bert A. Williams, Van and Schenck, Marilyn Miller, Dee Palmer, Frisco, Harry Fox, John Dooley and thirty others.

ALL STARS WIN SECOND.

All-Stars, With Sanders Pitching, Beat Giants in Final Game, 8 to 3.

The offerings of Roy Sanders proved too much for the Chicago Giants and "Cliff" Tierney's All Stars made it two straight in the final game of the series yesterday at Association Park, 8 to 3. A crowd of five thousand persons saw the game. In the first inning the Giants started off with two runs but from then on until the ninth only one man reached third base. The visitors made their other counter in the ninth on three hits.

Sanders struck out thirteen Giants and in seven of the nine innings he had them eating out of his hand. John Donaldson, who was scheduled to work for the Chicago team, developed a "Charley Horse" and Whitworth was sent to the mound.

The All Stars took a liking to the curves of Whitworth in the first ining and counted a run. In the second they added two more and clinched the victory by scoring five in the fourth. A double by "Jacks" DeFate, with the bases loaded, featured the All Stars' rally. DeFate was the first batter to face D. Brown after Whitworth has been derelicted. Two runs were in and the bases loaded with none out when DeFate delivered his pinch hit. Brown settled down after the fourth and allowed only three hits and fanned seven in the remaining innings. In a preliminary game the Peet Brothers trounced the Mudcats, 13 to 2. Meeker pitched for the Peet Brothers. The Giants and the All Stars may meet in a third game at Association Park next Sunday. The score:

FRANCE OUR SOLDIERS KNEW

Prodigality Astonished Shopkeepers, but They Turned It to Good Use.

When we first arrived in France the currency seemed more like soap wrappers or cigar coupons than real, honest-to-goodness money. We blew it, burnt it, threw it away. The French, with whom economy is almost a vice, stood around aghast for a while, then started gathering it in. They reasoned that only millionaires would be so extravagant, and raised their prices accordingly. After a time the money became very real to us, but by then the damage was done. We had sowed the wind and we stayed to reap a tornado. The huck private casual paid the same prices as the colonel, just because he was an American. The money that one of us dropped in France has founded the fortune of some future bourgeois dynasty. Today Paris is crowded with nouveaux riches of the war.

I don't think any of us who have the power of reasoning blame the French individually for exploiting us. We deserved it in most cases. But what is a very real grievance is that we felt that nothing was ever done by the powers that be to stop it. If you don't take the doughboys' word for it ask your peace conference representative. He got stung, too. The French are not noted for being far-fetched financially. They are accustomed to dealing in hundreds of francs and not in thousands, and they lost their heads. A bird in the hand is worth whole flocks in the bush, or any potential flocks which might be hatched into being with a little care. The French read our psychology aright in the first place, but they didn't play the game far enough. If they had there is a great possibility that they would be the richer by billions instead of millions, in the shape of a canceled war debt.—D. M. Walker, in Leslie's.

SCRAPS

After all, the easiest way to do a thing is to do it right.

Mercury, the swiftest traveler among the planets, moves through space at a rate of 30 miles a second.

An unusual capture in the shape of a white mole was made in Ayrshire, Scotland, recently. Moles are generally dark in color, a white one being rare.

Trapping Moles.

Owing to the indefatigable advertising methods of many mole-skin firms, the humble mole is now recognized as the foremost British fur-bearing animal. Its trapping, therefore, provides very lucrative employment for many people in agricultural districts.

The mole-catching season begins in November and ends about the beginning of April, when the skins become badly marked and the fur of poor quality. February and March are the best trapping months; then the moles run well and are easily caught.

An iron mole trap consists of two curved jaws, forced together by a powerful spring; to set the trap an iron trigger is lodged between the jaws, holding them apart. The set trap is inserted in a mole run, found between two mounds of earth by the aid of a pointed stick, and is placed so as to bring the trigger in the way of any passing mole. The trap is then covered with earth and moss to exclude light from the run.

A mole meeting the trigger of a trap is forced either to burrow round it or to knock it aside. The latter course is usually chosen, the trap is sprung and the mole held in the iron jaws, from which escape is practically impossible.

Getting Ball for Moses.

It was at the Greek theater, "Miriam, sister of Moses," alias Ruth St. Denis, was dancing the Israelites from the Red sea to the wilderness. At left center of the stage stood two policemen listening. The actors were discussing the merits and demerits of one god, Baal, who appeared to have a big influence on the play.

"What are they doing now?" asked one cop of the other.

"Well," replied the second, "it's kinda mixed up, but the way I make it the guy on the end with whiskers is trying to get ball for Moses."

The Best Way.

Traveler—Will I have time to get a drink before the train leaves?

Conductor—Yes, plenty of time.

Traveler—How do I know the train won't leave without me?

Conductor—Well, I'll go along and have a drink with you.

Lioness Fought a Motorcar.

The East African Standard describes a duel between a motorcar and a lioness. The affair, it says, happened at night near Nairobi. The chauffeur noted a commotion in the bush near the road, then the gleaming eyes of an enraged wild animal. He accelerated his speed at the instant the lioness leaped. She struck the hood and was thrown far in advance of the car, whose wheels then passed over her. The dead lioness was finally loaded into the car and taken back to the town in triumph.—From Outlook.
